Chapter 1 by Mickey

The only sound in Mr. Donald's 8th grade room was the occasional rustle of papers as his students wrote feverishly on their test and Mr. Donald's foot steps as he walked the aisle watching his student mark their papers. The door of the class room burst open and standing in the door way was a young soldier. Mr. Donald turned to greet the visitor. "Hello..." He stopped mid sentence and stared at the man who had entered the room. All the students were now watching the two. The man at the door smiled. "Just like you, Logan, to give these kids a test on Friday." Seeing his teachers pale face and look of shock, Shawn, a boy who sits by the door, stood up and eyed the soldier warily. "Mr. D should I call the Officer Roberts?" That seemed to snap both men from their daze. "No, that won't be necessary." Mr. Donald said as a smile graced his face. The two men started to move toward each other, they met in the front of the room. They stood face to face for a moment. Then they embraced. Mr. Donald pulled away and faced his class. "Class, I would like you to meet my twin brother, Dean. He just got back from a two year deployment." After seeing the brothers side by side the students could see that they were carbon copies of each other. The class started to applaud them they threw their arms around each others shoulders.

"Do Alexis and them know?"

"Nope. I had my buddy drop me off here and I came here first."

"Well I can't leave for another 10 minutes."

Just then Mrs. Layform came in smiling. "Yes you can I can watch your class for you. Go spend time with your brother."
